

Workshop Description

How do you foster a culture of productive and healthy debate?

“Collaboration is often hardest within polite groups of people because they don’t tend to express differences openly”

Eunice Parisi-Carew, Author of High Five

The payoff for effective collaboration is exploration of a diversity of perspectives, creativity, innovative problem solving and better decision making. Yet many teams and organizations struggle to create the conditions necessary for individuals to feel safe challenging ideas in a way that won’t impact relationships or do it in a way that doesn’t devolve into rancor.

In this highly interactive 3.5-hour workshop, we equip teams and leaders with the guidelines, skills, and practice needed to support highly productive debate, including how to manage the stress of having your ideas challenged. As with all of our programs, we answer the “how” with practical, proven strategies.

For good ideas and true innovation, you need human interaction, conflict, argument, debate.
